FAMINE PREVAILS IN THE GOLD FIELD

PROSPECTORS ARE WARNED BY A RETURNED MINER.

He Says Many Will Starve-Hundreds Still Crowding Into the Dig-Hand Is Not Sufficient For Those Standing of the clubs: Who Are Now There.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 30.-H. N. Stan ley, who returned to this city on the steamer Portland, says:

"I have been seven weeks at the mouth of the Yukon, at St. Michael's where I saw all the miners coming ou and interviewed them. As a result feel it my duty to advise everybody to stay out until next spring.

"Wild and in many cases exaggerated reports have been circulated since the first discoveries were made. The strike, however, was and is one of the greatest, if not greatest, in the world's history.

"Probably $2,000,000 was cleaned up this spring and next spring I look for from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000. The fields have hardly been opened up as yet.

"Those going in now must bear in mind that everything in that region was staked long before any reports reached the outer world and that those going in now must prospect for themselves, buy claims from the present owners or work for the owners.

"No new strike has been reported up to the time of my leaving and another may not be made for five ton, 1. years, although Alaska is an enormous country and will yet, I believe, pro- St. Joseph, 6. duce more gold than we dreamed of.

"But it is also in many ways a bleak, barren desolate country-a country incapable of supporting any great amount of animal life and a country of such rigorous climate, both winter and spring, that none but the most hardy can possibly live in it.

"I am aware there is a popular impression that supplies can be bought in the vicinity of the mines. They may at present buy at six times Seattle prices, but they are taken at even those bus, 4 figures faster than they can be got in, and before winter is half over, if the ids, 16; St. Paul, 10; Grand Rapids, 2. present population stays in, there will be actual starvation.

"In the name of humanity I ask that a stop be put to this wholesale transportation of people without supplies. Let no man be allowed to enter that region unless he carries with him enough food and clothing to last him a

He declined to be quoted as outlining the probable action | remarkable feature is that all is done that undoubtedly a strong position would be taken in opposition to "government by injunction." Destitution in Ohio.

Nelsonville, O., Aug. 30.-The destitution among miners here is very great. Mayor Buckley says 1,260 persons, the entire mining population of the town, have absolutely nothing to eat and 100 of these are sick. Near the outskirts of the city the engine was derailed while proceeding at a high rate of speed by spreading rails and thrown down a forty-five foot embankment. UPRISING MAY SPREAD.

Afridis Must be Checked-General Rebellion Feared. Bombay, Aug. 30.-Little fresh news has been received here from the frontier. An attack has been made on Shimwari, in the Samana range, but the attacking force was repulsed, losing five killed and many wounded.

There is considerable excitement among the tribes along the Bolan route to Quetta, and the telegraph line wires have again been cut. It is reported that the tribesmen are gathering near the Ziaret sanitarium, and much anxiety is felt regarding the safety of the women and children there, as the railway officials are asking for military protection for their property. If the route is considered safe, the women and children at the sanitarium will be brought away, otherwise troops will be sent from Quetta to protect them.

The general idea here is that if further delay occurs in punishing the Afrids, for which purpose at least 20,000 men are required, there will be a general uprising on an enormous scale, extending from Orazailand to Zaimukht, beyond Kuram and into Waziristan, despite the presence of the British field force in the Tochi valley, east of Rustam. Between Buner and the Indus, the tribes appear to be disinclined to join the rebellion.

Tax Claim Is Secondary.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 29.-United States Circuit Judge Clark rendered a decision which will cause consternation among tax collectors. In the case of A. M. Blakely vs. the Tennessee River Transportation company, on a question of a tax foreclosure, the judge decided that a mortgage claim involved in the case must have satisfaction before a tax claim so involved, and established the principle that mortgage claims should always have precedence over tax claims. If the decision is upheld by the Supreme court it will mean the loss of thousands of dollars to cities, counties and states in taxes.

HOW THE BENDERS Death-Bed Confession as to the Fate of the Kansas Murderers. W. H. Coon, whose statement has cleared up the Bender mystery, was a former resident of Clinton and was a student in Milton college. He was married in Milton, his wife being a daughter of the late Horace G. Hamilton, and his three daugnters and one son now live in Milton, their mother having died several years ago. Mr. Coon is well known to Rock county people through visits to his relatives. He was told of the fate of the Benders by Captain Carroll, a former resident of Montgomery county, Kansas, in a death-bed confession. The fate of the Benders has been a mystery ever since their wholesale murders in 1872-73 attracted national attention.

The confession was made at Beatrice, Neb , three years ago, and Mr. Coon kept his secret until last week, when he related it to Juage W. D Webb, late of the Atchison county district court.

The Bender house, as is well known, became a regular slaughter pan. The number of the family's victims has been variously estimated at from fifteen to thirty. In his confession Captain Carroll said he was one of a posse who dealt quick punishment to the murderers after their many villainies were discovered.

He declared that a posse of determined men followed and overtook the Benders-William, his wife and Kate -twenty-five miles from their home, and first shot the old man full of holes. Kate Bender and her mother looked on unmoved.

Kate was then told her time had come and she stood unflinchingly until several bullets had pierced her body, then fell to the ground dead.

The work was too bloody for some of the pursuers and Mrs. Bender was told to drive for her life. She got away and nothing was ever heard of her afterward. The lynchers swore secrecy which has been observed until the present confession.

The Bender house was constructed with a view to faciliating the murder of such of the travelers as were supposed to have money. There were two rooms downstairs, the partition between them being covered with was placed across the room at that point. Any one sitting on the bench would naturally lear his head arcinet would naturally lean his head against Paul Railway will sell excursion tickthe partition. He then conducted the business alone until he sold a twothirds interest to C. A. Cosgrove and H. I. Prusia, who became equal partners with him in the business. Since the business change in 1895 Mr. Hathorn has been vice president of the company and general superintendent of the plant. When Mr. Cosgrave and Mr. Prusia purchased their interest the plant was enlarged and the Mike Foley foundry works just to the west of the company's shops were purchased and made a part of the Hathorn foundry and machine shops. Today Mr. Hathorn becomes sole proprietor and will continue the business as he has in the past. He is a man who thoroughly understands the foundry and machine business and

CHAPTER I. -Fifteen years before the opening of the story John Lewis went to live in a place called Lee, in New Hampshire, with a little girl 6 years old, Virginia, the daughter of his deceased sister. He had a son who had been left at school, but ran away and shipped for China. Five years after Lewis went to Lee a family named Marvel also settled there. Young Walter Marvel met and loved Virginia Lewis. Alice Marvel, Walter's sister, and Harry Lucas also met and were reported to be in love with each other. At the opening of the story a person purporting to be the missing son of John Lewis arrives at Lee. Walter Marvel proposes for Virginia's hand to her uncle, who refuses telling him that his uncle, whose name he bears, was a villain and a convict. Young Marvel draws a pistol and shoots at Lewis, but his aim is diverted by Virginia. Soon after Lewis is found dead in his room with two bullet holes in his body. His death occurs simultaneously with the arrival of the man who claims to be his son. II.-Mr. Barnes, the celebrated detective, and Tom Burrows, another detective, take up the case, strongly suspecting Virginia as the criminal. III.—They examine the grounds about the house where the murder is committed and find footprints of a man and a woman, the woman's footprints strengthening their suspicians of Virginia. They also find two pistols, one marked "Virginia Lewis," the other marked "Alice Marvel," Virginia writes a let-ter and goes away with it. Barnes disguised follows her. IV—Virginia gives her letter to one Will Everly, who posts it. Barnes keeps his eye on it, gets possession of it and thus learns the whereabouts of Walter Marvel. V.—Virginia visits Alice Marvel, who betrays a knowledge of the murderer. VI.—John Lewis, the supposed son of the murdered mau, produces envelopes addressed to him to prove his identity. He excites suspicion by leaving his room at minight. VII, VIII, IX, X.—Barnes arrives at Lee with young Marvel, and an inquest is held, at which Alice Marvel testifies that she fired one of the shots that killed Lewis, and Virtuia confesses that she murdered her uncle, presumably to shield the real murderer. XI, XIII, XIII, XIV, and XV—Virginia is released and Walter Marvel is arrested for the murder. Barnes promises Virginia to try clear her lover and sets about doing it. follows her. IV-Virginia gives her letter to and sets about doing it.

CHAPTER XVI. MR. BARNES ON THE SCENT.

As soon as it was settled beyond all doubt that the clothes and locket found under the dam were the ones on which the fate of Walter Marvel depended Mr. Barnes was all activity again.

"Now," said he, speaking rapidly, 'there is not a moment to lose. We have saved the innocent, but we must yet find the guilty, and he has a week the start of us. How soon can I get away from this town?"

"A train passes Lee Depot at 1 o'clock. You have three-quarters of an hour in which to catch it. My horse and wagon are at your disposal, of

"Thank you, Mr. Everly. You must drive me to the station. Before I go I will give you some instructions, though, on the whole, all I wish is that you two will not tell any one of what we have found until you hear from me no danger threatening Walter." Mr. Barnes considered a moment and "If you find it necessary, you may tell her that your uncle, Mr. Lewis, is "Not dead!" exclaimed his two auditors in a breath. "Yes, tell her that he is not dead.

That will certainly relieve her mind." "But how can I explain that when she knows to the contrary?"

"You must exercise your ingenuity. Tell her that there has been a mistake as to the identity of the corpse, or anything that occurs to your mind, only do not tell her about the finding of this bundle. I do not wish Mr. Burrows to know what I have done, for fear that he may make trouble for me and perhaps defeat the ends of justice. Now I must be off. Use your judgment, and, above all things, whatever you do tell your sick friend, keep it from getting out. Goodby! Trust me!"

Mr. Barnes was fortunate in finding trains to meet him as he pursued his way to New York by a circuitous route. The one which he boarded at Lee took him as far as Worcester and thence he went on to Albany, knowing that from that point he could easily reach New York. As it was, he arrived in that city before noon on the following day. Leaving the train he hurriedly proceeded up town to Washington Heights. "The name is John Lewis, and it is about 14 or 15 years since the lad was supposed to be here. Moreover, it may help you to remember him if I tell you that it is further supposed that he ran away from school and went to sea."

"I am afraid you have been misinformed," said the schoolmaster, shaking his venerable head. "Nothing of that kind ever occurred here. I do not recall such a name of a pupil, but I knew a man of that name once and have good reason to remember him." "Will you tell me about it?"

"Certainly. Now let me see. It must have been about the very time that you mention, though I could give you the exact date, a gentleman called here and wished to see the school. He said that he had a son whom he wished to place in a military institution such as this. His name was Lewis. After I had explained our methods to him he went away, promising to call again. This he did, and on his second visit he told me that his son had refused to go to a military academy, and that he had placed him elsewhere. However, he seemed very much interested in the school and made several suggestions as to improvements. When I explained to him that there were no funds for any such purpose, he generously offered to pay any bills that might be incurred. I protest. ed at first, but he persisted. He even came here himself to superintend the alterations."

"Yes, about a month." "Can you tell me whether his mail was received here?"

"Yes, that is all that I wish, except that I would like to find the son. However, as you cannot aid me there, I bid you good morning, and I thank you for your courtesy."

Leaving the academy, Mr. Barnes walked as far as the nearest station of the elevated railroad and went down town to Grand street; thence he walked to the office of the Norwich line of

He copied the number of the stateroom assigned, and left the dock with a smile of satisfaction. "I think I may have some dinner now," said he to himself, and he entered a restaurant where he partook of a substantial meal, after which he went to police headquarters, asked for the inspector and was at once shown into the private office of that official.

"Good morning, inspector," said Mr. Barnes. "I would like to ask whether there has been a report of any one missing in this city during this week?"

"Why, yes, there has!" The inspector eyed him keenly. "Mr. Barnes, what "I do, and I think it is because you know or think that your husband went to that town expressly to kill Lewis." "He did nothing of the kind," she answered quickly, losing her self possession in her excitement. "My husband only wanted to recover his child, whom that man had stolen from him." "At last we have it," said Mr. Barnes with satisfaction. "Your hus-

"You dare to tell me this and want my help?

"We must think of the innocent." "What do I care for the innocent? I

"Curse you, you are a demon!" Mr. Barnes considered a moment, and then said:

"I have half a mind to arrest you anyway!"

"Do so if you wish! But I will tell you nothing, though I should be kept in prison forever."

"I haven't time to wait in the city, or I would try the experiment. As it is, "I must not tell you that." She col. I must be sure that I can get you when I want you." Mr. Barnes may not have seen her more, so little notice did he seem to take. After a few minutes at the window she went in the direction of the door, but apparently with no special object in view. Suddenly, with the agility of a cat, she made a dart for the knob and grasped it. Still the detective made no sign. The lock shot back and a man enered. Addressing Mr. Barnes, he said:

"I am No. 56." "A shadow?"

"A shadow." "What is the meaning of this impertinence?" said the woman, in a rage, but neither of the men appeared to notice her. Mr. Barnes continued:

Gas Stove Philosophy

Light a burner only when you are ready to use it and turn it off the instant you are done with it. This is the real secret of small gas bills. When a top burner is first lighted the fire is then as hot as though it had been lighted an hour. Take instant advantage of this and lower flame after a thing has once started to cook. Gas is the most economical fuel when ordirary care is taken. Gas Stoves can be used as well in cool weather as in the heated season; their great convenience is the same at all times The Gas Stove is a complete stove for all kinds of cooking The even heat of the sas Stove brings better cooking results than that of other stoves. As an emergency stove the Gas Stove has no equal. It pays for itself on occasions of great hurry. The draught of the Gas Stove is always the same-because it requires no draught. The wind may shift or the chimney become clogged, but the Gas stove does its work just the same. The Gas Stove lengthens one's life and the overworked housewife can truly appreciate the leisure hours gained through its use.

FASHIONABLE FANCIES.

A Perfect Rage For White-Hats, Gowns, Gloves, Parasols, Shoes.

Women who have leisure to meditate upon all possible refinements of the toilet have row started the idea that certain colors suggest certain perfumes and should be accompanied by them, the scents employed being changed as the costume is changed. For example, with a mauve or purple gown violet perfume is used; with green, mignonette; with white, white rose or white lilac or lily of the valley.

pink, blue, lavender and green play a con spicuous part. Yet it simply proposes to the refined mind the case of Dr. Fell, which was so acutely felt by Thackeray: "I do not like thee, Dr. Fell. The reason why I cannot tell, but yet I know it very well. I do not like thee, Dr. Fell." The sense of immaculateness in underwear is somewhat marred by the admissions of color, and refinement is more truly indicated by what the French call the dessous than by the outside. What is outside is for the world to observe. What is underneath is for one's own taste. Therefore if one's outside garments are splendid and one's inside ones questionable one's own taste is questionable.

The fancy for Chinese and Japanese silk underwear has waned, and it is well that it has done so, for silk does not wash well, and the first requisite of underwear is that it should be washable to an unlimited extent. Muslin, lawn, cambric and batiste replace silk fabrics very advantageously. Tucks, insertion and lace and embroidery form the trimmings, with the frequent addition of ribbons run in beading or tucked on in the shape of bows and knots.

The illustration given in today's issue shows a costume of pale green and white glace taffeta. The skirt is plain, three bands of cream guipure insertion simulating a very short tablier. A very narrow. scant ruffle of pale green taffeta finishes the foot. The corsage of pale green taffeta opens back and front over a plastron of guipure. The front is formed of two scarfs of taffeta, outlined by full bretelles of guipure, which form epaulets also. The pointed corselet consists of three narrow straps of white satin. "We do not know. I told you, when I last saw you, that he would pass the night at the squire's, but it seems that he must have retired to his room after the funeral, for he was here at break-

"Well? Go on! Go on!" The detective was impatient.

"After breakfast he again went to his room. We saw nothing more of him until dinner time. Then I went in to not been seen since."

"Perhaps he went to the squire's." "I went over to see Alice this morning and learned that no one had seen him since the funeral."

"Too late! Too late after all my trouble!" moaned the detective. He leaned his head on his hands and seemed almost about to weep. Virginia did not know what to say to him; so thinking it best to leave him to himself she noiselessly left the room. Mr. Barnes remained in one position for fully ten minutes, but suddenly he jumped up and seemed all animation again.

"Miss Lewis! Miss Lewis!" he cried in great excitement. At the sound of his voice Virginia came hurrying in

"Miss Lewis," said he, speaking rapand has not been seen since?"

"Anything else is impossible, you mean. This is not the day of miracles, notions, to which plain white is the only and a man cannot disappear in this way

"It will be easy enough to find it if we know that it is in existence. In the first place, there must be a way to enter it from that room in which your uncle slept. Come, we will go there first."

Together they went to the room, and Mr. Barnes looked about for some sign that would guide him aright. After reasoning for a moment, as Burrows had done at the Epping house, he said: "I have it. I will go straight to it.

Burrows heard this man in the secret apartment, and Burrows was up stairs; so I am sure that the place of which we are in search is above. Now what is its exact location? It must be accessible to this room, and yet the room which Burrows occupied is as large as this. Now observe that the closet in the corner projects out into the hall. In your room there is a similar closet. On this floor, in the hall, between these two projections for the closets, is the little passage leading from the main hall into the dining room. I have noticed that up stairs there are no closets and, of course, no such passageway. Therefore the space occupied by them below indicates where the secret room is to be found on the next floor."

"But how shall we get in?"

"I think it will be difficult for you to do so, for I expect that the entrance is through the ceiling of the closet in this room. I will now look."

Mr. Barnes opened the closet door, and then started back as he saw the great mastiff lying on the floor within. The dog arose and went up to Virginia, whining pitifully. Then he went back into the closet, raised himself upon his each person. "Do you see," said Mr. Barnes, "the brute knows that there is something wrong up there?" Virginia coaxed the dog away from the closet, and the detective stood on a chair and examined the ceiling. In a moment he announced:

"I have it. Here is the trapdoor." A minute later he had drawn himself up through the aperture and disappeared. Very soon, however, he returned, and as he dropped to the floor he said:

"He is up there-dead! Suicide, I suspect. You must go at once for the squire. Pardon my not doing so, but I have a reason for wishing to remain with the body until it be turned over to the coroner."

Virginia gladly hurried away upon an errand which she knew promised the speedy release of her lover.

John I. Platt, editor of the Poughkeepsie Eagle, tells this incident of the recent meeting of the State Press association at the Thousand islands: "One family group that we got acquainted with consisted of two very bright girls. When we asked them whom they were with, one of them replied promptly: 'We are here by ourselves. I represent the paper, and this is my sister.' We asked what she did on the paper, and she answered: 'Everything that is to be done in a newspaper office. You see, ours is a small office, and I have to set type, run the press, pick up ads., attend the office, report or anything else required - except,' she added after a pause, 'except write editorials. My father and I don't agree in politics, so he won't let me write editorials.'

"There was no doubt whatever, either, of her right or her ability to 'represent the paper,' and she wasn't the only lady member of the association either. The fact is, we editors of the sterner sex have got to bestir ourselves or these independent women who don't always agree with their fathers in politics, will can take them elsewhere. be crowding us out of our vocation."

For the Slender Girl.

If the too stout woman endures torture, the too slender one suffers no less. Visions of the bean pole and horrid descriptions of the attenuated maiden flit through her mind as her glass tells her DEARBORN & ALLEN how poorly she carries off the full skirts of the summer.

But there is a skirt designed specially for her which makes her a better figure than she could ever hope to have. It is godet in the back, rather tight fitting on the hips, but furnished with an immense box plait in the front. It is laid flat at the belt and is allowed to flare only around the foot. The box plait may be lined with black taffeta. which shows, as the folds shake out in walking, like a fan.

The waist worn with this must be a blouse, finished with a ruffle to give Of fullness at the hips.

The crinkled goods of the summer All Kinds, make a very nice box plaited skirt, and there is nothing as nice for trimming them as the small needlework yoke and ruffles that come for the purpose.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Woman's Gift.

Treasurer Howard N. Wakeman of the Pequot Library association of Southport, Conn., has received notice that Mrs. Virginia M. Monroe has placed on interest the sum of $30,000 to be credited to the interest of the Library association. The Pequot Library building is the gift of the late Albert B. Monroe, husband of the donor of the last named sum. Mrs. Monroe is the daughter of the late Frederick Marquand, who became well known by his gift of the chapel to Yale college. He lived for years in a homestead where now stands the Pequot Library building.
